

About 4 cents in every humanitarian dollar went directly to local organisations.

The people who reach a crisis first, and stay after everyone leaves.

The promise was 25 cents.

■ Went directly to local organisations, 2025 ■ The promise: 25%

Total humanitarian funding fell 20% in 2025, to its lowest level in a decade. Money for local groups fell faster.

Part of the reason is paperwork.

One local organisation with three staff wrote 21 policies just to pass a due-diligence check.

Many local groups do the work well. They struggle to prove it in the format donors ask for, again and again, for each new partner.

SO I BUILT

Aidfolio: free tools that help local organisations show the work they already do.

Readiness check

For a donor or UN partner assessment. A pack and a dated action plan in about 30 minutes.

Fair cost

Your true overhead rate, what grants leave unfunded, and a brief to ask for a fair rate.

Risk-sharing plan

Who carries each risk today, and the support to ask for.

Private by design.

- ✓ Runs in the browser, even offline
- ✓ Nothing typed is uploaded
- ✓ No account, no sign-up
- ✓ Never invents policies you don't have
- ✓ Free for every local organisation, always

Built for the forms they already face.

UN HACT micro-assessment

UN Implementing Partner PSEA assessment

Charter for Change due-diligence passport

Plus plain guides to each, and 27 hand-picked free resources: budgets, safeguarding, sanctions checks, security and more.

Independent. Not affiliated with the UN, Charter for Change or any donor.

Know a local organisation facing a donor assessment?

Send them the link. It takes one message, and it could save them weeks.

Free. No sign-up. Works on a phone.

aidfolio.org